

AGROECOLOGY TRAINING AND LEARNING FOR SOLIDARITY

Take part in Developing a European Agroecology Learning and Training Network

Learning, education and knowledge sharing are central to expanding the practical and political aspects of agroecology, food sovereignty and the autonomy of food producers in Europe.

THE NETWORK WILL...

Report from the International Forum for Agroecology
<http://bit.ly/2eA8qnd>

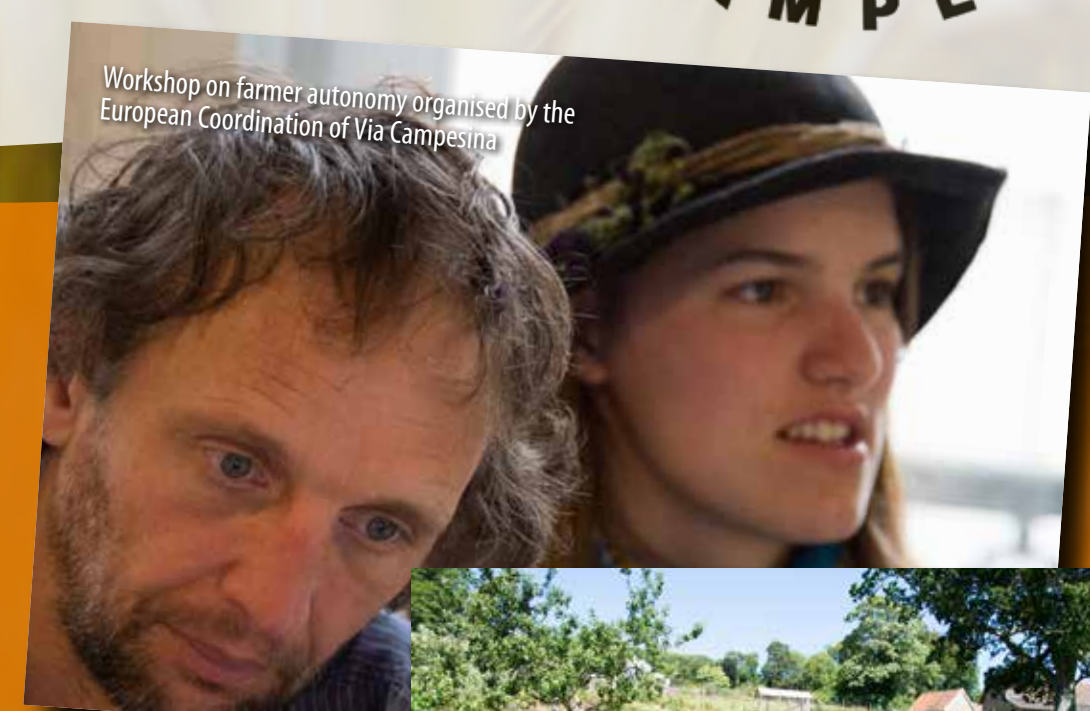

Focus on the vision of agroecology outlined in the Declaration of the International Forum on Agroecology

"The diverse knowledge and ways of knowing of our peoples are fundamental to Agroecology. We develop our ways of knowing through dialogue among them (diálogo de saberes). Our learning processes are horizontal and peer-to-peer, based on popular education. They take place in our own training centers and territories (farmers teach farmers, fishers teach fishers, etc.), and are also intergenerational, with exchange of knowledge between youth and elders. Agroecology is developed through our own innovation, research, and crop and livestock selection and breeding."

Contribute to International Movement Building

Links up with the international movement coordinated by La Via Campesina to build Agroecology Learning Institutions and Agroecology Schools in all world regions.

Workshop on farmer autonomy organised by the European Coordination of Via Campesina

Be driven by the participation of farmers, educators and grassroots organisations from Europe and beyond

Get Involved to enable the exchange of experiences, cooperation and solidarity. contact us at info@eurovia.org

Farmers and researchers meet in France for project: DARE - Democratising Agriculture Research In Europe

Combine Practical and Political Training

Because agroecology is simultaneously practical, scientific and political it requires training and learning that reflects these dimensions.

'So training on how to do agriculture is not a necessary thing - this is happening naturally in the rural communities. But what is missing, and this is what is happening in agroecology, is more political training on how to articulate our political demands and how to act on achieving political aims.' (Ramona Duminiciu, EcoRuralis)

Workshop at Monkton Wyld Court, in the UK, location of agroecology training centre called Landbase

